Erskine To Start For The Dodgers In Try For Win

By LEO H. PETERSEN
United Press Sports Writer

BROOKLYN (AP)—Carl Erskine, Brooklyn's No. 1 "money pitcher" in World Series competition, was Walt Alton's choice — and the choice of odds-makers also — to defeat the New York Yankees today and square the series at two games apiece.

The Dodgers, with Erskine facing big, right-handed Don Larsen, ranked 13-to-10 favorites to make it two straight victories over the Yankees today, although Casey Stengel's crew was still quoted as a 17-to-10 choice to win the series.

The weather forecast for today's game was cloudy with a high temperature in the low 70s. It rained Friday night and Stengel indicated he hoped it would continue so that three of his injured outfielders, Mickey Mantle, Irv Noren and Oank Bauer, might enjoy a day of rest.

Precedent Favors Erskine

Erskine, however, was raring to go in quest of his third World Series triumph over the Yankees. They beat him once in three decisions but he had the satisfaction of setting a World Series record at their expense in 1953 by striking out 14 batters in one game.

Erskine has precedent going for him against the Yankees today. Twice previously, in 1947 and in 1953, the Dodgers dropped the first two games of the series to the Yankees, only to bounce back and capture the next two games. Both times, however, the Yankees came on to win the series.

In Larsen, Erskine is opposing a 6-foot-3, hard-throwing 26-year-old resident of San Diego, Calif., who was instrumental in pitching the Yankees to the American League pennant this year after being recalled from Denver of the American Association in late July.

Larsen was obtained from the Baltimore Orioles last winter in the same deal which brought the Yankees "Bullet" Bob Turley, who was charged with Friday's 8-3 defeat, Larsen came up with consistently strong showings and wound up the season with a 9-2 record.

Had Arm Trouble

Erskine, who turned in an 11-4 slate for the Dodgers this season, was troubled with a sore arm for a good part of the campaign but the Dodgers weren't overly concerned when their ace Podres, went against the Yankees Friday even though he, too, had been sidelined with an injury and had not pitched a complete game since June 14.

Alston even hinted that a victory by Erskine today might put the Dodgers in the drivers' seat for the series. It was believed he might then start southpaw Karl Spooner, who has looked good in relief so far this series, in the fifth game, or perhaps come back with big Don Newcombe, the first game loser.

Elated by Friday's triumph, Alston predicted the Dodgers would "really start rolling now."

Podres, who celebrated his 23rd birthday with a local seven-hitter, also felt "we got the bad baseball out of our blood and we'll go all the way now."

Mantle Belts One

Podres was backed by an 11-hit attack, led by his battery-mate Roy Campanella who drove in three of Brooklyn's runs with a homer, double and a single.

Turley was tagged for three hits in the 1-13 innings he worked and was yanked in favor of Tom Morgan when he suffered a wild spell in the second inning.

Podres pitching and hitting and the brilliant base running tactics of veteran Jackie Robinson were the key features in Brooklyn's one-sided victory.

In a last-minute switch, Stengel installed Mickey Maule in the starting lineup and the "Commerce Comet" responded with a home run his first time up in the second inning but he favored his injured right thigh and was not expected to start today.

Mr. and Mrs. Hillard Rogers On Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Hillard Rogers are vacationing in New Mexico, on a large cattle ranch owned by a cousin of Mr. Rogers. Last week they called from Texas enroute to the ranch and yesterday they called friends from New Mexico and asked that copies of the daily Ledger and Times be sent to them.

They are expected to return to Murray next week.

Berle Leaves Gap In NY TV Scene

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD — Milton Berle, television himself, left a gap in the New York scene when he moved his show to Hollywood this week to start his eighth TV season as another "new Berle."

Uncle Miltie is one of the few TV stars who has been around long enough to reminisce about the "good old days" eight years ago when he put a show with a $12,000 budget for a handful of viewers.

Now his budget is eight times that, and the one-time brush platter of square bottles is a subdued 47-year-old who has settled down to "a country life" in the California sun. He is producing, directing and appearing on 13 color shows from NBC here, and he speaks loftily of contributing to "the progress of television."

Changes Proven Format
"I changed my format last year, and now I've changed again to a variety show," explained the comedian as he relaxed, or tried to, after his strenuous hour program. "As I'm going on every third week, you can't use continued stock characters or situations."

"I've always had the urge," he continued, waving his cigar, "to further the progress of television, to try to create something for the future."

Down the years Berle has withstood an onslaught by the critics. He's been accused of borrowing his material and hogging the show. But his philosophy remains: "I do the best I can—you can't please all of the people all of the time."

Long Show Business Career
"Of course the critics have bothered me," he said. "We all are human and sensitive. I've been the butt of these things for years. But this is my 42nd year in show business."

Why has he lasted? Berle's solution is that "TV consists of one thing, a personality, and if the audience likes the personality, the show is sustained."

Mr. TV deserted New York because "I like it here, and let's face it, I'm getting old. I want to slow down. I want more time for a social life."

Berle is happily situated in a rented home among the palm trees of Beverly Hills and he insists he hasn't shed one tear for Sardi's or Lindy's in New York. "I will not miss any place that my wife, Ruth, isn't in," he said gallantly. "I should have met her 25 years ago, but then, she would have been only eight."

Three Months of Color In Spring Bulb Garden

Tulips make a lovely decoration for the patio.

To get the best effect from spring flowering bulbs in the home garden, do not plant them in single rows or massed beds. The grace and beauty of the daffodils, hyacinths and tulips are much better displayed when they are planted in groups, the number in a group depending upon the size of the garden.

A group of five bulbs is approximately equal to one perennial plant, and such groups can be arranged in pleasing combinations with other bulbs or plants. For maximum effect they may be planted at focal points in the garden where their beauty will stand out.

Three months of color can be enjoyed from bulb plantings, but this requires that several kinds be planted, chosen for their flowering season. Each kind gives a relatively brief display, and several may for a brief time overlap, as do the daffodils, hyacinths and early tulips. The late tulips have the longest season.

For a full three months, usually March, April and May, you will require snowdrops, which blossom when the ground thaws out, followed in turn by scillas, crocus, species tulips, hyacinths, daffodils, early tulips, and then late tulips, which include the parrots and late doubles.

It does not take many of the earliest flowers to make a well-come display since they come at a time when nothing else is in bloom. They also bloom when it is cold outside and will be enjoyed most if they can be seen from the picture window. Daffodils bloom before trees and shrubs are in leaf and do well

Can't Get Used To The East

By HARMAN W. NICHOLS
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON — Graham Quesada, a former Lt. Cmdr. in the Navy has been in the Far East many times, and has just returned from a long tour of duty.

But "Bud," as he is known to his old Navy buddies and with the boys in the civilian personnel in the Military Sea Transportation Service, just can't get used to ways of the Orient.

Take checking into a house or a hotel over yonder.

"You shed your clothes and get ready for a nice bath," he told me. "And then you look around and all of your chuds have disappeared. Next day you look again and everything is clean, brushed and put on hangers and in drawers. All without your asking."

But the thing which still shocks the veteran of World War I and War II is the business of taking a bath.

You get in the little old tub in Japan and start to soak and read a good book, and then there is the patty-pat of soft shoes.

"I never can remember," he said, "many baths as I have taken there, that a nice lady is coming in to scrub my back. She is a paid Japanese servant, whose duty is to wash down the backs of guests. The servant just rubs away with a brush with a long handle on it, and you have to watch out for stray bristles. When she is through she bows and goes away."

Bud is as tough as they come even at age 57.

But other things about the Far East bother him—but not enough to keep him from thinking about going back after his three-month leave is up.

Things like the business of driving in traffic in Japan.

"You can't see where you are going," he said. "Japanese women ride all over the streets, rain or shine, with their umbrellas up. Each has a couple of little Japanese riding in the jump seat to the rear. And a mere American in an automobile can't tell where he is going unless he can see through a big blooming flowered sprinkle stick. Japanese bikes have no rear-view mirrors."

Bud, by the way, bought a new car on his way back from Washington. He was amazed to find that the District of Columbia was interested in the fact that he still held a 1915 driver's permit.

Officials did suggest it might be a good idea for him to apply for an up-to-date one—even though the old one had no expiration date on it.
